Rolling The Greatcoat

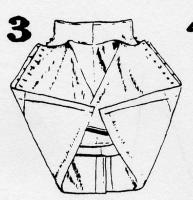

The following illustrations diagram the "Manner of Rolling the Cloak" as described in the 1841 Cavalry Tactics (also fo Cooke's Cavalry Tactics). Reprinted by permission of Nick Nichols and the Civil War Cavalry Review.

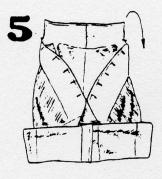

The cloak being entirely unfolded, the sieeves are laid flat and extended parallel to the two front edges of the cloak; each. ... is then turned up and tolded near the elbow, so as to give a length of 3' 6" inches from one elbow to the other, the middle of the cloak remaining uncovered.

The cape is then turned down over the sleeves, in such a manner that the front edges may exactly cover those of the doek. The lower extremity of the cloak is turned up about 10 inches; the skins are likewise turned towards each other, so that they may touch the fold of the sleened.

and that, being folded a second time upon themselves, they may give to the clock the form of a rectangle;

the lower extremity of the cloak is then turned up about 7 inches, and it is rolled as tightly as possible, commencing at the collar and pressing the knee upon it as it is rolled, to hold it. The part of the cloak which is rolled is then introduced into the son of pocker formed by the pert which was turned bact.
